LONG-IDLE MILL WILL NOW EMPLOY HUNDREDS

ABOUT 10 years ago the Brunswick Mill, the big building at the end of the main street of New Mills, a once-prosperous cotton concern, closed its doors and hundreds of people were thrown out of work.

The 6,000 windows became a target for stone throwers, and since the closing of the building 3,000 panes of glass have been smashed.

To-day nearly all the windows have been renewed by Mr. Alfred Matlow, who has taken over the mill for the manufacture of chocolates and biscuits.

It was after touring three counties to find suitable premises for the evacuation of his London firm that Mr. Matlow took over the buildings.

Ready in a Month

"It will be a tremendous job to modernise this mill, but we expect to have completed it by the end of the year," Mr. Matlow told the Manchester Evening News.

"The mill will be ready for full-speed production, however, in about a month. By that time machinery will have arrived from London.

"I shall soon be able to offer work to hundreds of local people. Key workers will naturally come from London, but I am employing local labour for all the general jobs.

"There are already vacancies for a hundred young girls, and other types of employment will soon be offered."

Other Firms Invited

Brunswick Mill consists of two buildings, one of five floors of 6,000 square feet each, and the second of four floors, each of 3,000 square feet.

An official of New Mills Urban Council said to the Manchester Evening News:

"It is because we believe the town is ideal for manufacture in wartime that we have invited a number of London firms to open branches here."

Time Bombs Are Money-raisers

Time bombs recovered in a north-west area are being displayed at Ashton to raise funds for the Chief Constable's Spitfire fund. The total announced to-day is £3,186.

A dollar note was found in the collecting box outside the police station this week. Several contributions have been received from Ashtonians living in America. Children have raised substantial amounts by holding bazaars in the street.
